A new pride mural was unveiled Wednesday morning in Buffalo's Old First Ward.

Students from the Old First Ward Community Center's arts program, under the guidance of Buffalo-based artist Christopher Kameck, constructed and painted the mural for the National Fuel building which is adjacent to the future home of The Riverline.

“It is the perfect embodiment of The Riverline—our future ribbon of green that will connect Canalside with the Buffalo River just as it connects the Old First Ward, Perry, and Valley neighborhoods”, said Nancy Smith, Executive Director of the Land Conservancy. "On The Riverline, people of every race, sexual orientation, and ability will be welcomed."
